

ASIA PACIFIC ACCREDITATION COOPERATION (APAC)

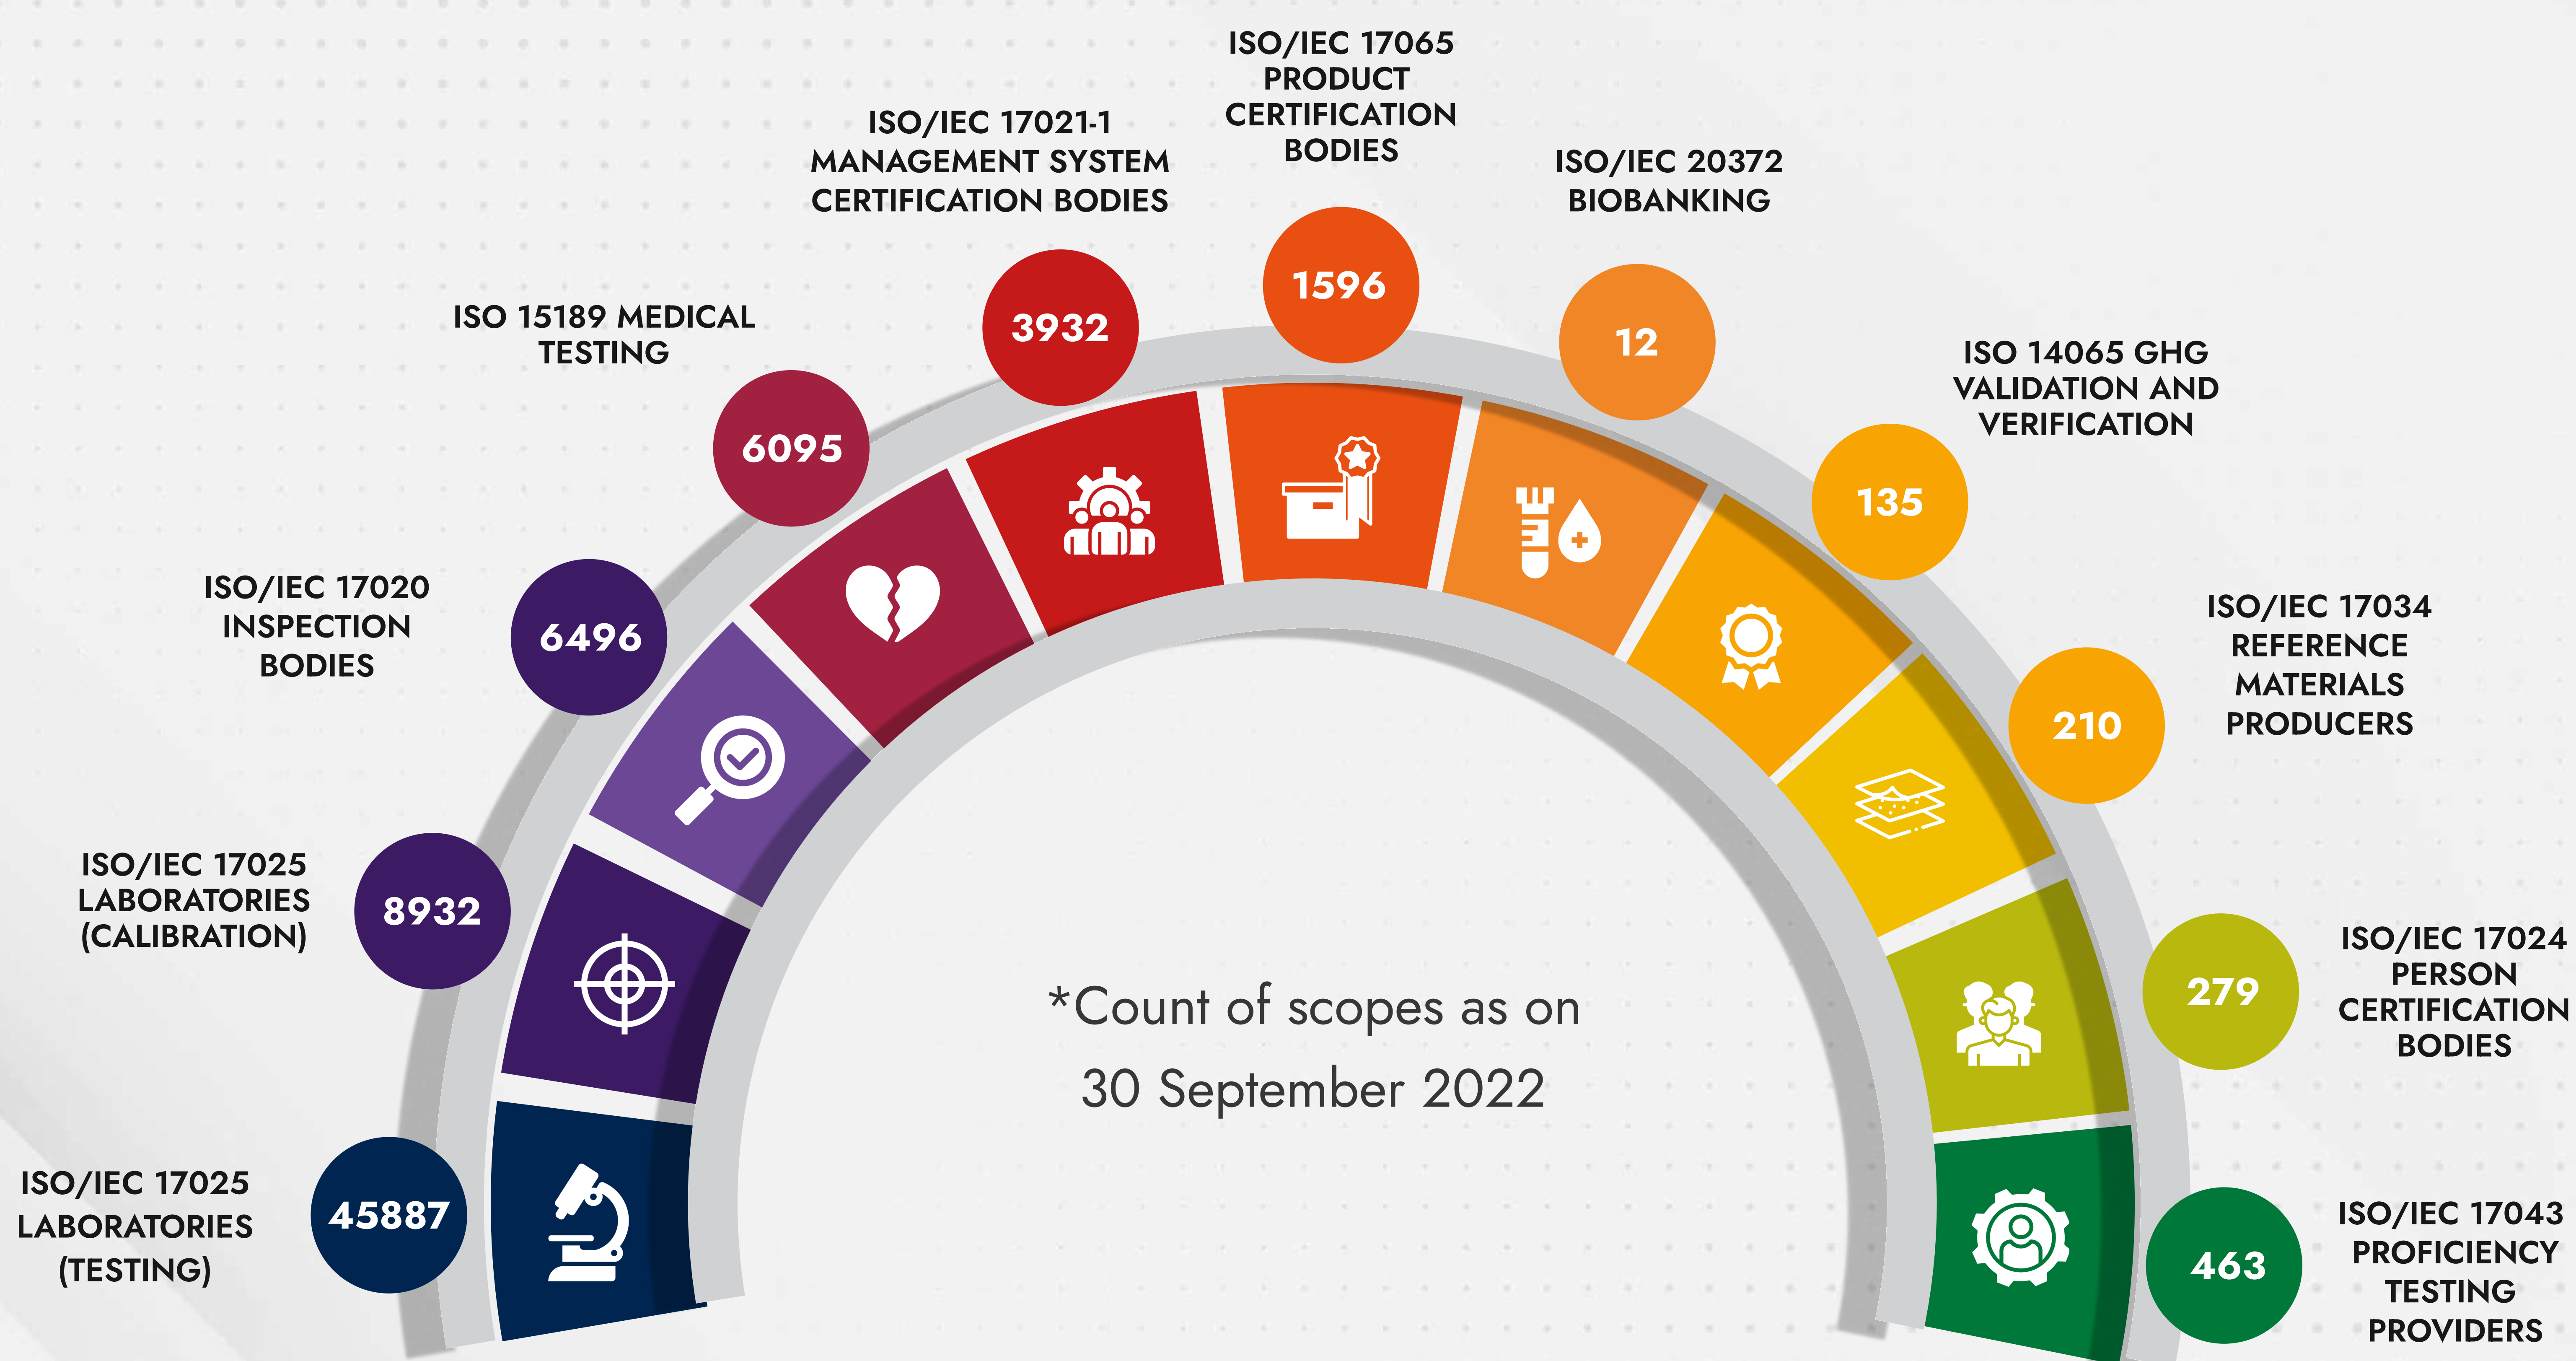

is the Regional Association of Accreditation bodies in Asia Pacific region with the primary role to manage and expand mutual recognition arrangements (MRA) among accreditation bodies in the region, thereby facilitating trade. The MRA facilitates the acceptance of conformity assessment results (eg. test reports, inspection reports, management system certificates) across the region and with other regions around the world. Mutual recognition is granted to an accreditation body by APAC after conducting successful peer evaluation as per requirements of ISO/IEC 17011. The evaluation is conducted by APAC using a team of qualified peer evaluators.

Members who have undergone successful peer evaluation become Full Members. Associate members are accreditation bodies which are building capacity to become APAC Full Members. APAC also have a membership category as Affiliates. APAC also has partnership with other international bodies (like ILAC and IAF) and other regional bodies.

APAC MRA SCOPES & TOTAL SCOPES ACCREDITED BY APAC MEMBERS

Use of conformity assessment bodies accredited by APAC MRA Signatories provides confidence in conformity assessment results. This helps businesses, governments and communities manage risks and make sound decisions, and facilitates intra-regional and international trade.
